Approximately 5% of all women have endometriosis and about 30% of these have an endometrial cancer. Endometriosis and endometrial cancer are both quite similar. They are both related to estrogen stimulation. The development of endometriosis-associated cancer is by far not more than expected. The increase in cancer incidence among these women is possibly overestimated. This report critically analyzes the available literature and gives a more detailed description of our results from the years 1998-2003. Endometriosis-related endometrial cancer is not rare and it seems to increase the incidence of endometrial cancer. Endometriosis seems to be related to an increased incidence of endometrial cancer, but one cannot conclude from the literature that there 82157476af
